TAMAHAGANE STEEL

Curved hand-forged curved blade without Hi (groove) with and Chu-Kissaki (tip). The blade spine is iori-mune, the edge is without Niku. (sharp cutting blade). The blade is forged from 2 sorts of steel, the softer C45 is embedded into the harder C105. This forging art comes from the Japanese model Makuri which was taught in Japan for centuries only to the best smiths. The two types of steel are forged up to 25000 layers and thanks to the traditional clay-wrapping technique for differential hardening, you can see the martensite crystals and the Hamon line. This is made visible only by manual polish of the carbon steel blade. The hardness of the Mune is ca 61° HRC and the Ha (blade edge) is ca 48° HRC.
